

Versailles Treaty – Materials in English

Versailler Vertrag – Materialien auf Englisch

1. Allgemeine Informationen

<http://www.bbc.co.uk/education/modern/versail/versafla.htm>

On-line - general information on the Treaty. Simple English. A nice moving map showing geographical changes in Europe. Sections about what the Germans thought and what the Italians thought (could be an interesting contrast to other partners' materials (?)) Some exercises too.

2. Der Text vom Versailler Vertrag

<http://www.lib.byu.edu/~rdh/wwi/versailles.html>

The text of the Treaty.

3. Pictures (Landkarten, Bilder, Karikaturen usw)

Ein Projekt :Versailles “Simulationen”:

Write your own Treaty of Versailles in no more than 500 words. That is the challenge set by learn.co.uk - the Guardian's new resources website for pupils, teachers and parents. The search is on for 100 schools to take part in a re-creation of the historic peace conference at the end of the first world war. "Using material from the Guardian archives, we will create web pages to give a sense of the atmosphere in the run-up to the signing of the treaty on November 11 1919," says creator of the Versailles experience, David Gardner, a history teacher and chief examiner in the subject. "Not only will participating schools absorb a lot of history, but the Versailles role play and online debate will give students the chance to pick up many ICT skills." "Active citizenship is a core activity of the Versailles debate," says Gardner. "It shows people how governments arrive at decisions." Schools can apply to register for the debate on learn.co.uk until October 27. Those not selected can access all material on the site for their own role-play, and follow the debate on the internet. Each of the 100 selected schools will split students into six teams, representing each of the countries at Versailles: Great Britain, USA, France, Italy, Poland and Serbia. Before the debate proper, teams will have studied background material to the war on learn.co.uk. They will build up a negotiating position and produce an agenda to bring to the conference. On the 'live' online day itself, November 10, they will come out of role and post their agenda up on the website. From then on - and schools will have had to clear their timetables for this - the students will learn how to compromise, reining in their more extreme demands to achieve their aims, under the watchful, moderating eye of online experts - historians and academics. By the end of the following week, the schools will have written up their own treaty. The five best will win a copy of the Encyclopedia Britannica in either DVD or CD-Rom format, and their treaties will form part of the learn.co.uk history site - together with all the material from the Versailles Experience, which will remain on the Learn site.
